Films are cultural artifacts created by specific cultures. They reflect those cultures, and, in turn, affect them. Film is considered to be an important art form, a source of popular entertainment, and a powerful medium for educating—or indoctrinating—citizens. The visual basis of film gives it a universal power of communication. Some films have become popular worldwide attractions through the use of dubbing or subtitles to translate the dialog into other languages. The individual images that make up a film are called frames. In the projection of traditional celluloid films, a rotating shutter causes intervals of darkness as each frame, in turn, is moved into position to be projected, but the viewer does not notice the interruptions because of an effect known as persistence of vision, whereby the eye retains a visual image for a fraction of a second after its source disappears. The perception of motion is partly due to a psychological effect called the phi phenomenon.

A film's cast refers to a collection of the actors and actresses who appear, or star, in a film. A star is an actor or actress, often a popular one, and in many cases, a celebrity who plays a central character in a film. Occasionally the word can also be used to refer to the fame of other members of the crew, such as a director or other personality, such as Martin Scorsese. A crew is usually interpreted as the people involved in a film's physical construction outside cast participation, and it could include directors, film editors, photographers, grips, gaffers, set decorators, prop masters, and costume designers. A person can both be part of a film's cast and crew, such as Woody Allen, who directed and starred in Take the Money and Run. A film goer, movie goer, or film buff is a person who likes or often attends films and movies, and any of these, though more often the latter, could also see oneself as a student to films and movies or the filmic process. Intense interest in films, film theory, and film criticism, is known as cinephilia. A film enthusiast is known as a cinephile or cineaste.

The August 26 release of Tenet marked the first major U.S. blockbuster film to be released theatrically. Due to safety concerns in the United States, the film premiered in 70 international markets through a staggered release model, before being released in select U.S. cities on September 3.<sup>112</sup> Its box office revenue had reached 0 million by September 6, 2020, with a modest million in the United States.<sup>113</sup> In September 2020, Sony Pictures Entertainment Chairman Tony Vinciguerra stated that the company will not release any big budget films to theatres until the pandemic is over.<sup>114</sup> On October 2, No Time to Die was delayed once more to April 2, 2021, due to a requirement for the film to have a worldwide theatrical audience. This came amid continued closures of cinemas in the key U.S. markets of Los Angeles and New York City, as well the reinstatement of restrictions in the United Kingdom due to a second wave.<sup>115</sup> As Universal Pictures held the international distribution rights to No Time to Die, its film F9 was delayed to May 28, 2021 Memorial Day weekend as to not cannibalize it.<sup>116</sup> No Time to Die has since been postponed again to September 30 in the UK and October 8 in the U.S.<sup>117</sup><sup>118</sup> In March 2021, F9 was postponed once again to June 25.<sup>119</sup>
